

Having the rank of number one on a list of states with strict "Do Not Call" laws is a position all New Jersey residents enjoy and suspect few would want to relinquish. Overturning the law is a mistake. Caving to lobbyists of the telemarketing industry is a slap in the face to every individual who voluntarily placed their name on the list.

These telemarketing firms are fortunate. Instead of a "do not call" list it could have been a "you may call" list. Tell me how many people would voluntarily place their names on that list?
